

Davide is currently a Principal Investigator at the University of Dundee, which represents the last stop of a scientific journey which brought him from native Italy to Germany and then to the United Kingdom. In this journey, Davide made significant contributions in understanding how plants discriminated between 'microbial friends' and 'foes'.